1. Objectives and Purpose of the Call for Proposals
The overall purpose of this call for proposals is to provide support to local, grassroots, women and young women’s civil society organizations in Ethiopia and South Sudan¹ to participate and lead in the planning and response to food insecurity in conflict and crisis settings.

The call for proposals specifically contributes to WPHF’s Impact Area 3: Enhanced Participation and Leadership of Women in Planning and Response to the food security crisis. It is aligned with the WPHF’s overall goal of contributing to peaceful and gender equal societies.

Initiatives should aim to reach those women and girls experiencing multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination, such as those excluded due to geography, ethnicity, disability, age, migratory status, HIV status, among others and which is in alignment with the 2030 Agenda and the principle of leaving no one behind.

2. Country Context Linked to Call for Proposals
The magnitude and severity of acute food insecurity has reached alarming levels. According to the Global Report on Food Crises 2023, over a quarter of a billion people were acutely food-insecure and required urgent food assistance in 58 food-crisis countries/territories in 2022, the highest increase ever recorded.² This situation is the product of multiple, complex and interlinked causes and drivers, which have been shown to impact women harder than men.³ Around the world, particularly in conflict and crisis contexts, food insecurity and its impact on livelihoods are creating ripple effects for women and girls, including health and safety risks, increased sexual and gender-based violence (SGBV), and decreasing access to education. Despite this alarming situation, global and national policies and plans designed to address hunger rarely refer to women as leaders who can play an active role in food security, with a great proportion of them overlooking women entirely.

In crisis and conflict settings, although women are often the hardest hit, they are also an untapped resource for recovery. Promoting women and girls’ agency, participation, leadership and decision-making in conflict and crisis response and recovery is essential in the fight against food insecurity.⁴ Women’s organizations’ instrumental work across the nexus of food security, sustainable peace, and gender equality is making headway in humanitarian and crisis response, socioeconomic recovery and peacebuilding processes and there is a clear need for prioritizing women’s and girls’ needs in conflict and crisis contexts across the nexus of food security, sustainable peace, and gender equality.

The context of Ethiopia is characterized by multiple crises including conflict, displacement, climate-related shocks, and persistent disease outbreaks, including cholera – all disproportionately affect women and girls. Recent erratic climatic events and prolonged drought in Afar, Oromia, Somali and Tigray regions, combined with intensifying inter-communal tensions and regional disputes, as well as a simultaneous break in food aid since June 2023 (and since April in Tigray), have heightened food insecurity in the country. The severity of prolonged food insecurity has resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives, including most recently 210 deaths due to starvation in Tigray region. The Ethiopia Humanitarian Response Plan 2023 targets more than 20 million people across the country, including an estimated 4.6 million internally displaced people. Around 13 million people are targeted for humanitarian response in drought affected areas in 2023. The humanitarian needs in Ethiopia remain high and continue to be triggered by the combined effects of climate events, conflicts and intercommunal violence, and disease outbreaks. Accordingly, more than 10 per cent of Ethiopia’s total population continue to be targeted for food assistance until the end of the year, and another more than 4 million people will continue to be targeted for non-food assistance. Women and girls in Ethiopia continue to face the brunt of the crisis as they constitute the majority of IDPs and survivors of SGBV, resulting in additional risks to livelihoods, exploitation, as well as food insecurity.

Affected by subnational conflicts, displacement and violence against women and girls, food insecurity is now a growing concern in South Sudan. The recently released South Sudan IPC analysis shows that the levels of severe acute food insecurity in South Sudan remain high, with an estimated 5.83 million people affected between September and November 2022, particularly in the Jonglei, Unity, Upper Nile, and Lakes States. South Sudanese returnees who have come back due to the ongoing armed conflict in Sudan are particularly affected by acute food insecurity. The crisis in South Sudan has thus increased gender inequality, with men controlling the most productive assets, making most of the decisions relating to food security and consumption and taking most of the employment opportunities. Access to food continues to be limited for many households, due to loss of livelihoods, reduced income from petty trade, sale of livestock and crop produce, with women-headed households being the hardest hit. The scale and severity of acute food insecurity in South Sudan is estimated to remain high due to the protracted negative impacts of conflict and insecurity, poor macroeconomic conditions, high food and non-food prices, currency depreciation, and seasonal declines in food stocks. These will also lead to displacement, depletion or loss of assets, and disruption of livelihoods, further contributing to reduced income for purchasing food and essential needs.

3. Scope (Location and Duration)
The WPHF will fund qualifying projects in:
- Ethiopia, with a geographical focus in: Afar, Tigray, and Somali regions

About the Women’s Peace and Humanitarian Fund (WPHF)
The WPHF is a global pooled funding mechanism which aims to stimulate a significant increase in financing for women’s participation, leadership, and empowerment in peace and security processes and humanitarian response. The WPHF is a flexible and rapid financing mechanism. It supports quality interventions designed to enhance the capacity of local women to prevent conflict, respond to crises and emergencies, and seize key peacebuilding opportunities. The overall goal of the WPHF’s theory of change is to contribute to peaceful and gender equal societies. Achievement of this goal will require that women are empowered to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from conflict prevention, crisis response, peacebuilding, and recovery. Since its launch in 2016, WPHF has been supporting over 1100 civil society organizations and is present in 44 countries or group of countries.

The WPHF is governed by a Funding Board at the global level, which is comprised of four UN entities (currently UN Women, UNHCR, UNFPA and PBSO), four donor Member States (currently Norway, Germany, Italy and the United States), as well as 4 Civil Society Organizations (currently Feminist Humanitarian Network, Kvinna till Kvinna, Action Aid and Women’s Refugee Commission).

At the country level, the final selection of shortlisted proposals will be undertaken by a National Steering Committee, which is comprised of UN agencies, civil society organizations, donor representatives and governments.
